

To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing to express support for the Plains & Eastern Clean Line and the regulatory approvals required for the project to move forward. This transmission project will facilitate billions of dollars in new investments, increase economic development and provide thousands of jobs. The Plains & Eastern Clean Line is critical to continuing the region's leadership in clean energy production.

Today, there simply is not enough transmission capacity to move abundant renewable power from western Oklahoma, southwest Kansas, and the Texas Panhandle to utilities and customers in Tennessee, Arkansas, and other markets in the Mid-South and Southeast. The Plains & Eastern Clean Line helps solve this problem, and will also serve the public interest by stimulating economic development, creating new jobs, enhancing energy security, expanding inter-regional transmission capacity, and improving system reliability.

Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas are seeking to harness their abundant renewable resources in order to meet demand for clean energy. However, the region's resources far exceed its own power needs. If new transmission lines are built to transport this renewable energy to areas of high demand, thousands of megawatts of new generation can be developed and the renewable energy industry in the Southeast and Mid-South will continue to grow. The Plains & Eastern Clean Line will not only benefit the states in the project region, but also advance the nation's clean energy economy. Additional renewable energy will bring more jobs and greater revenues to local communities.

Sincerely,
